
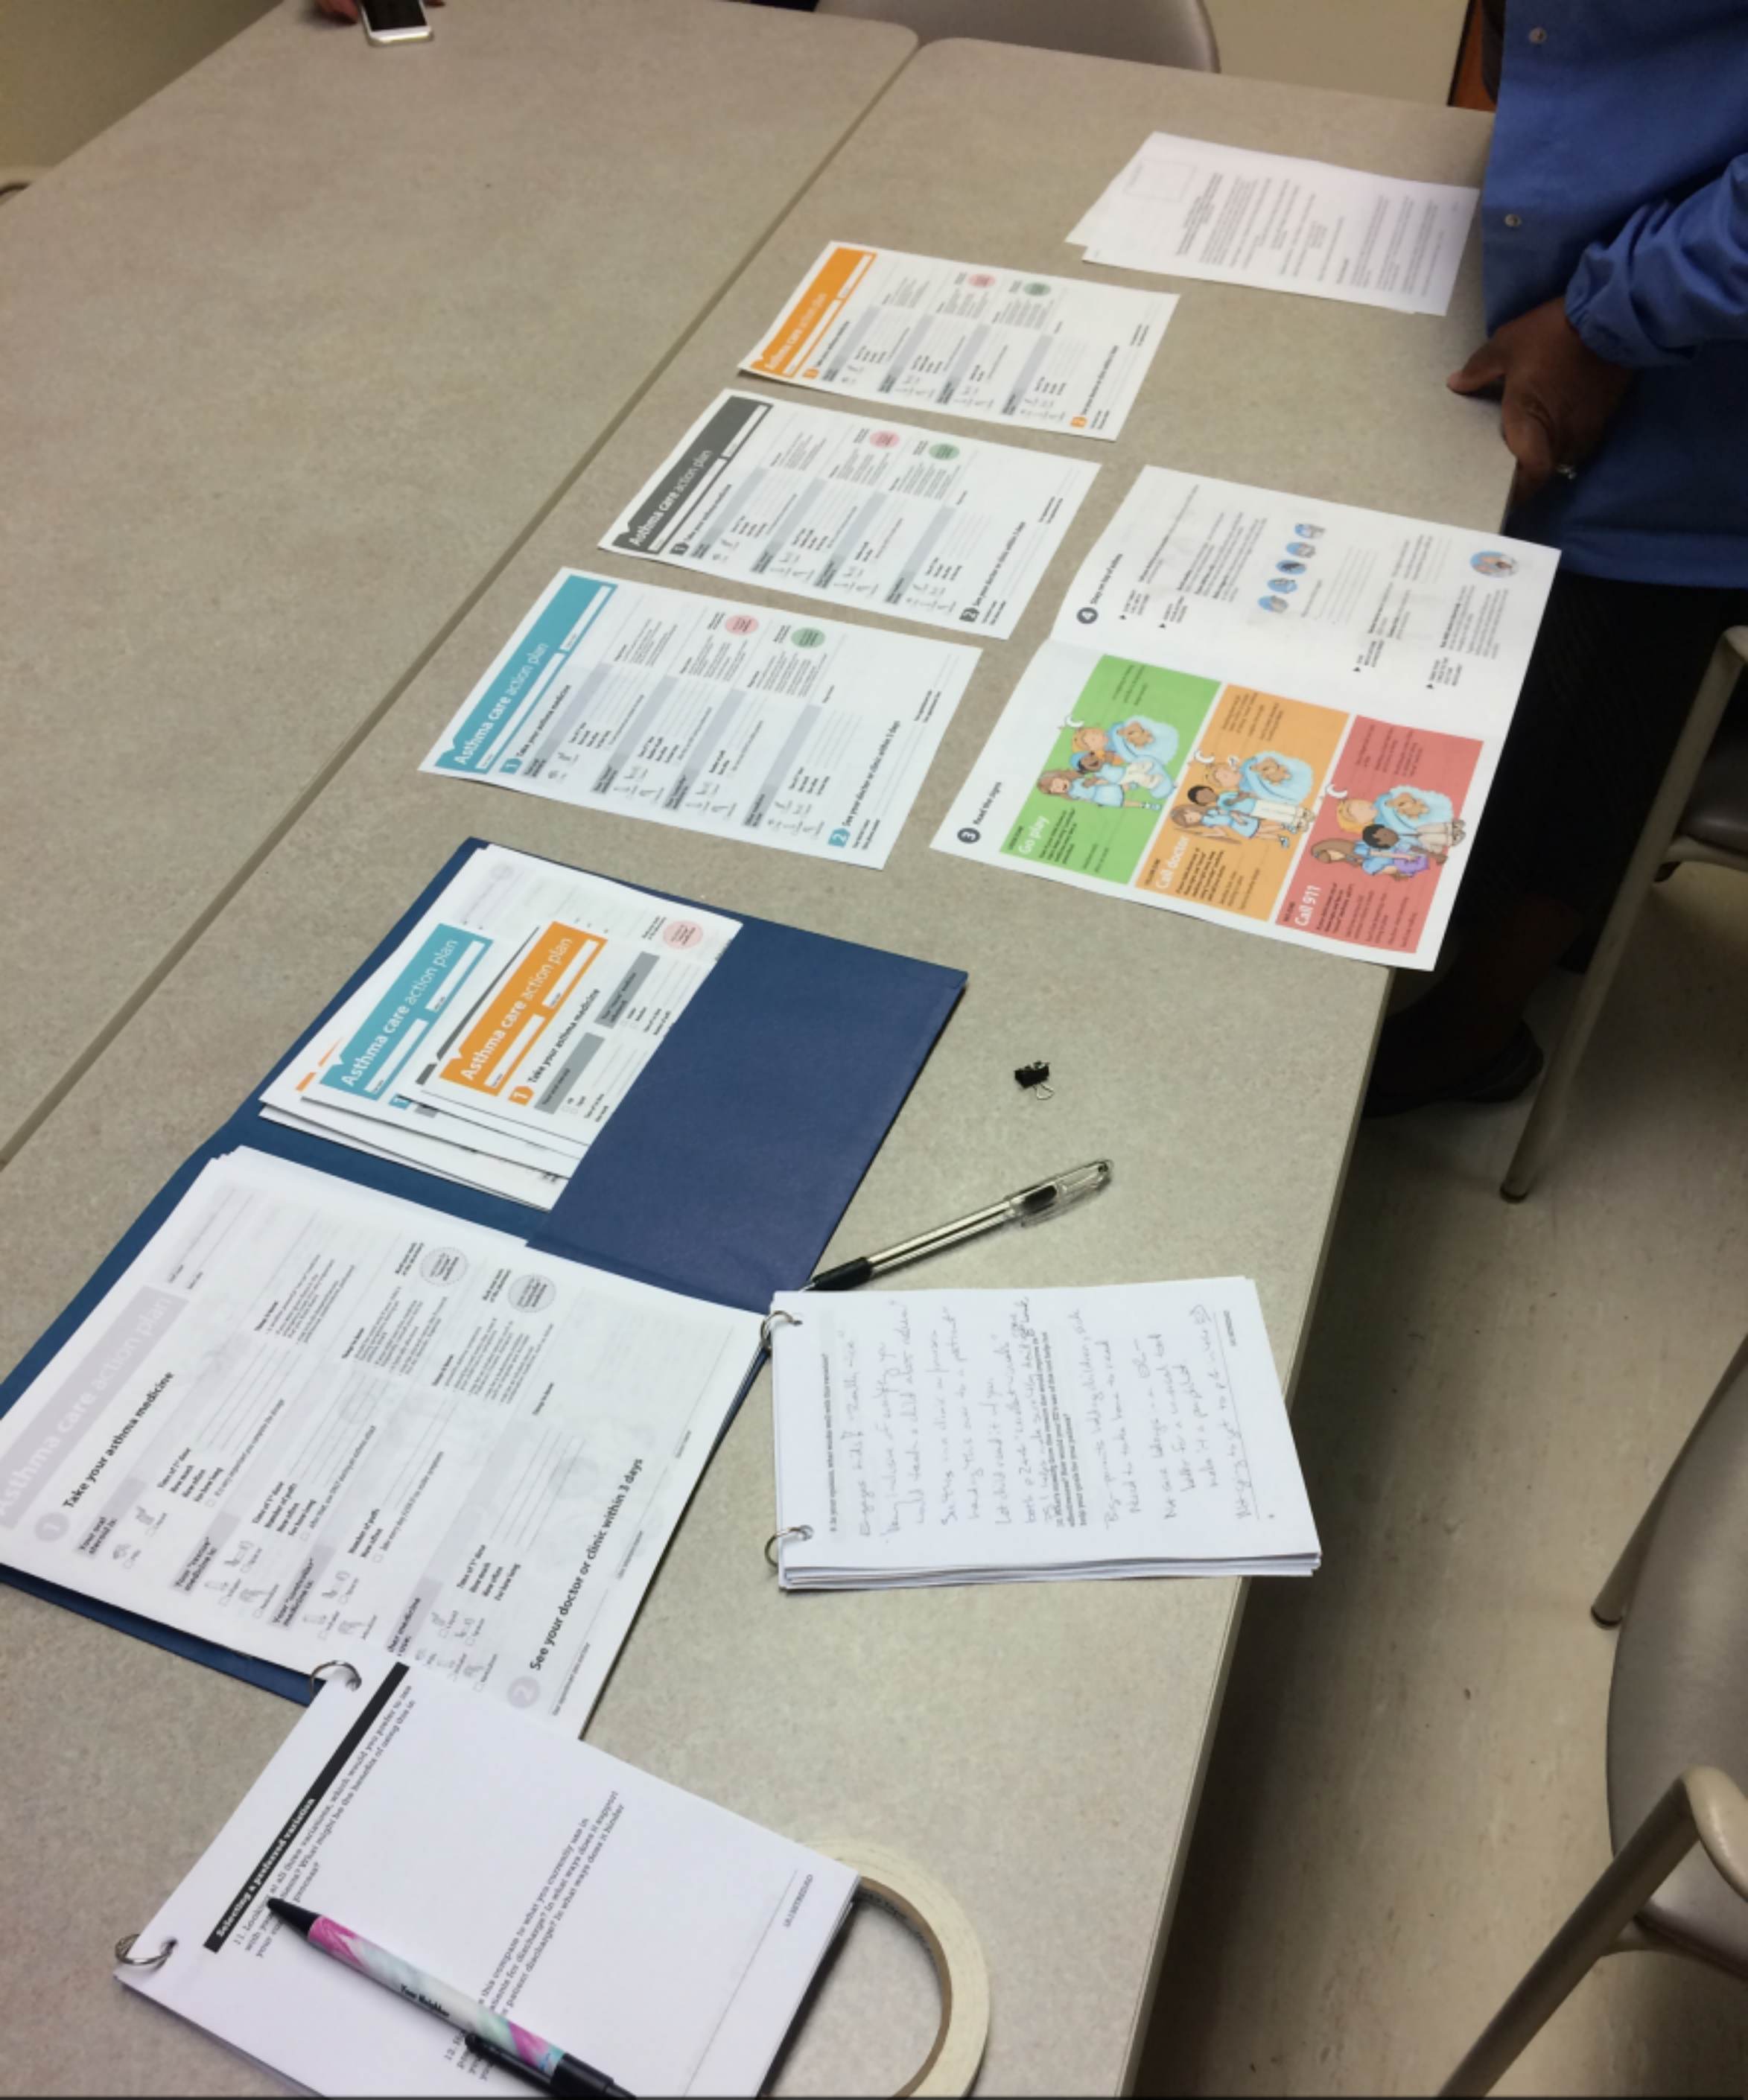
Co-creation method that allowed clinical stakeholders create their ideal discharge / educational tool for their patients to receive in the ER



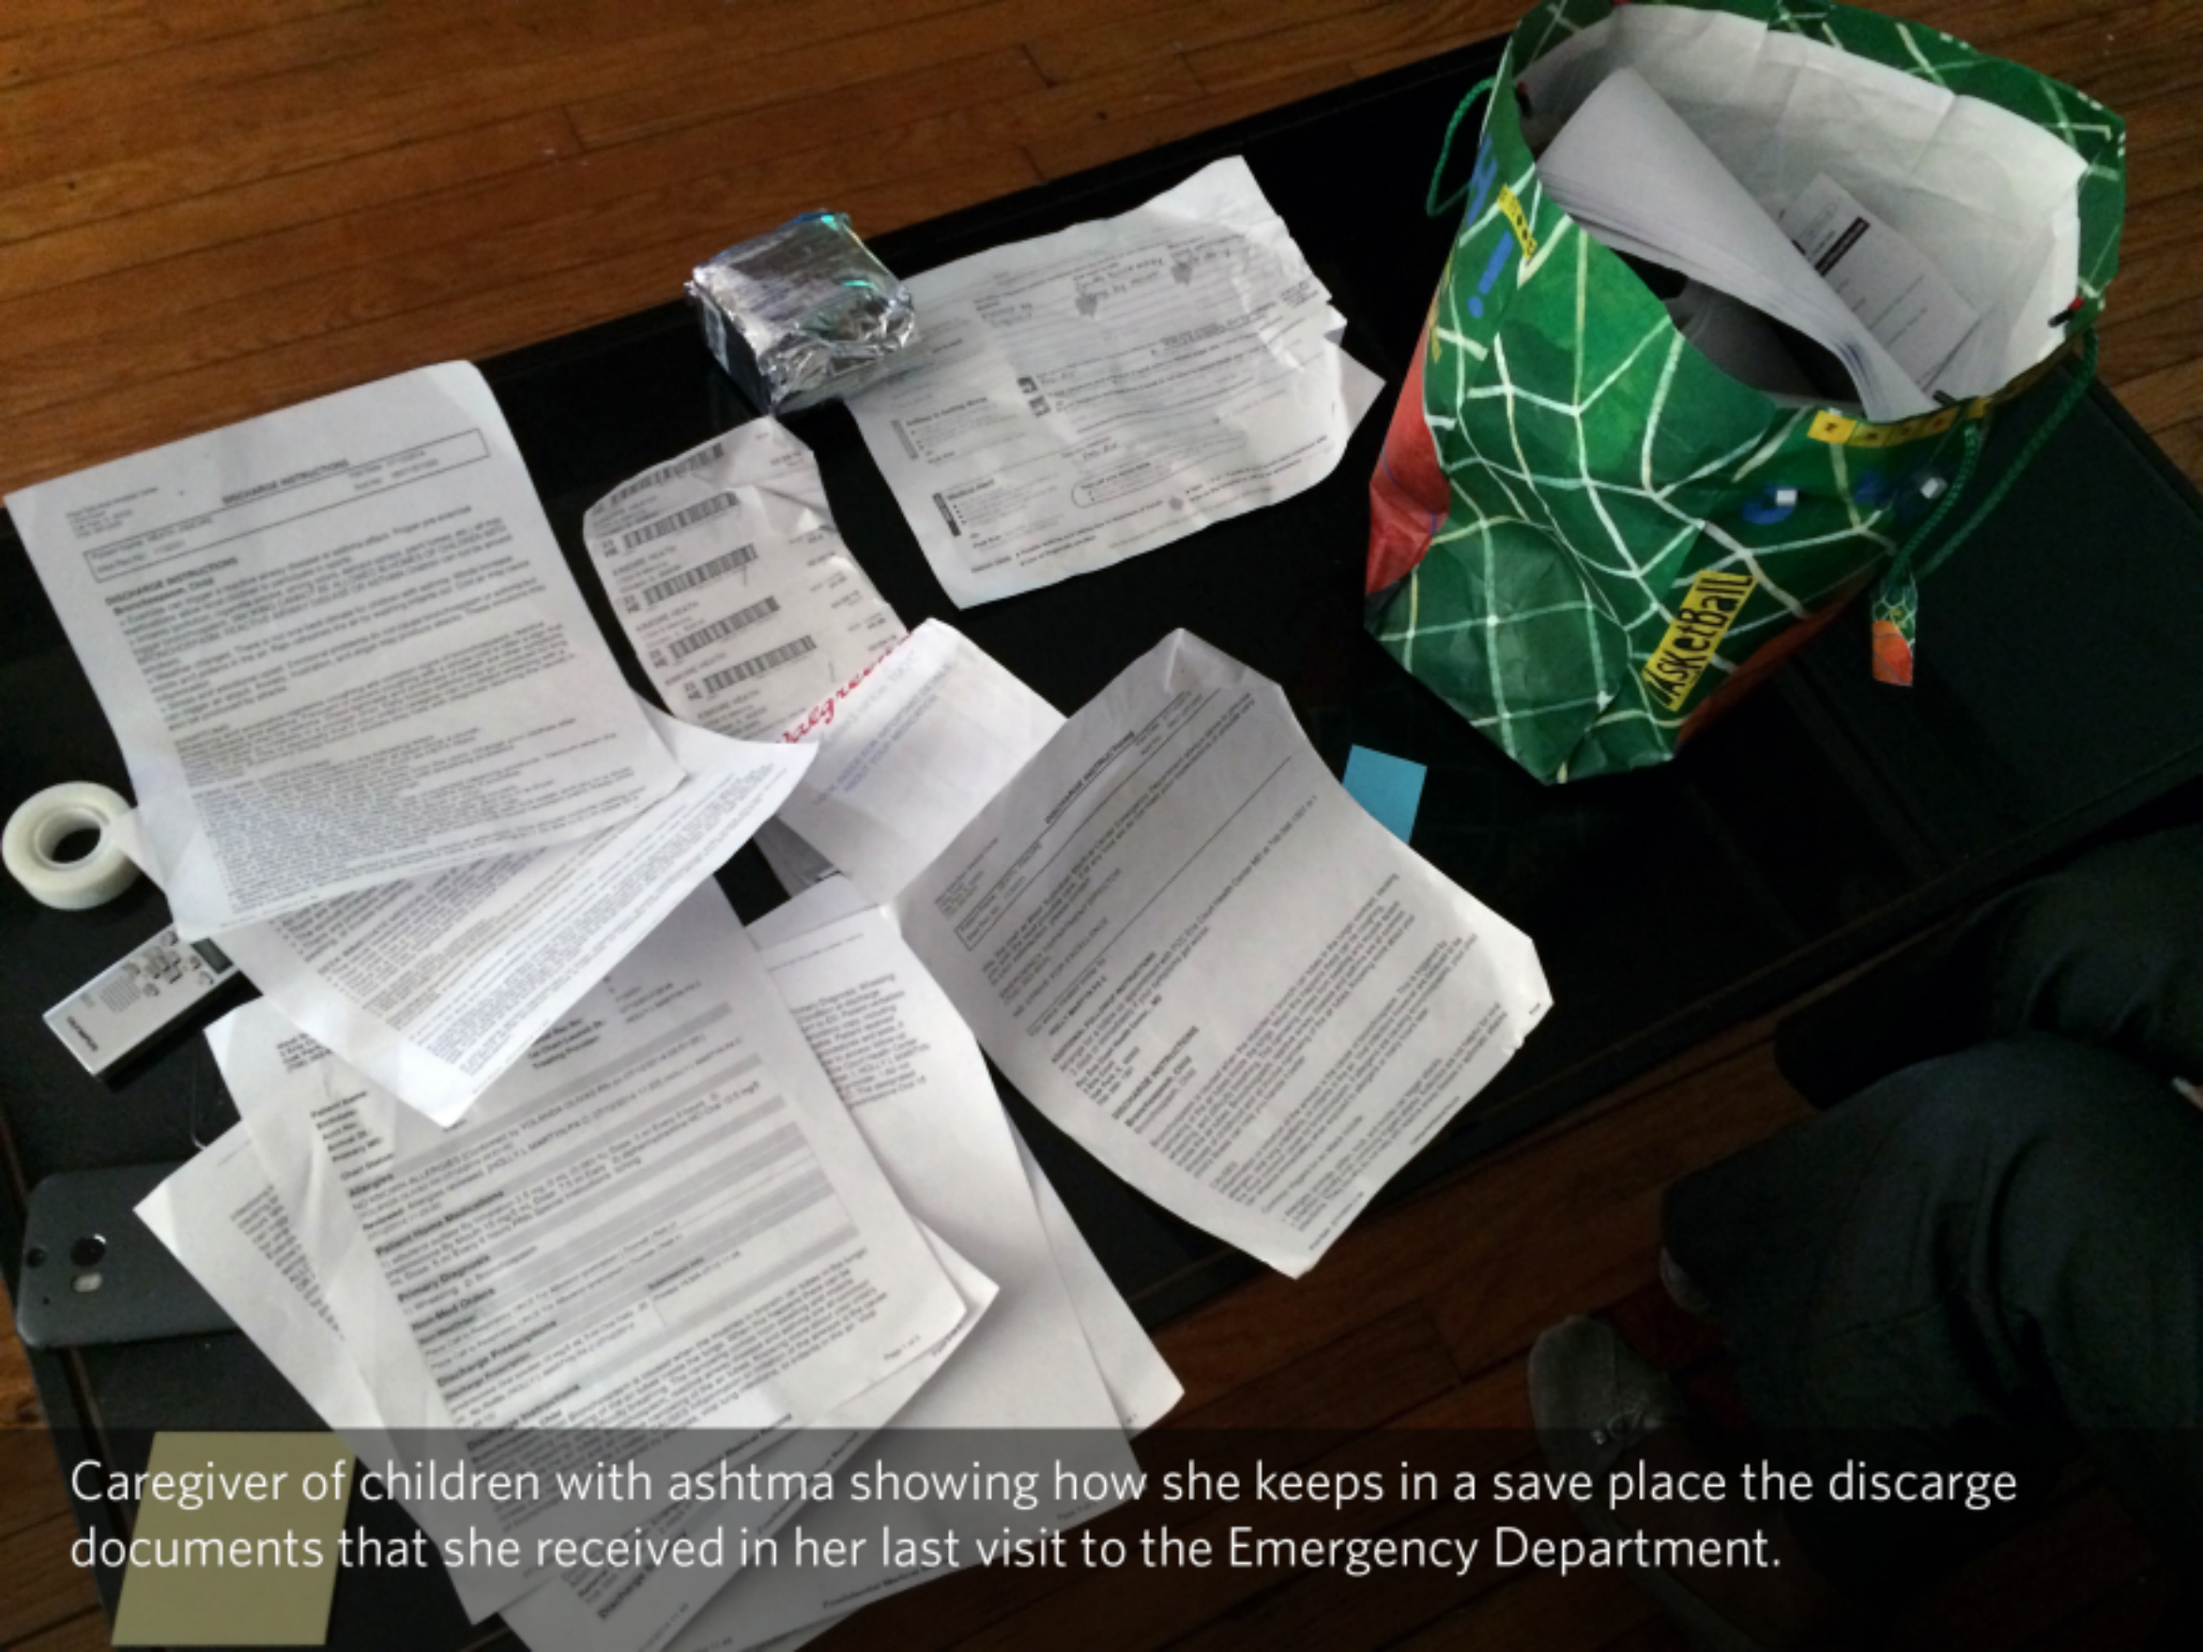
Co-design session with physician interacting with the three different prototypes developed in the second round of testing

Use of the space in the immersive client engagement workshop (First round of analysis with Chicago Trial researchers)

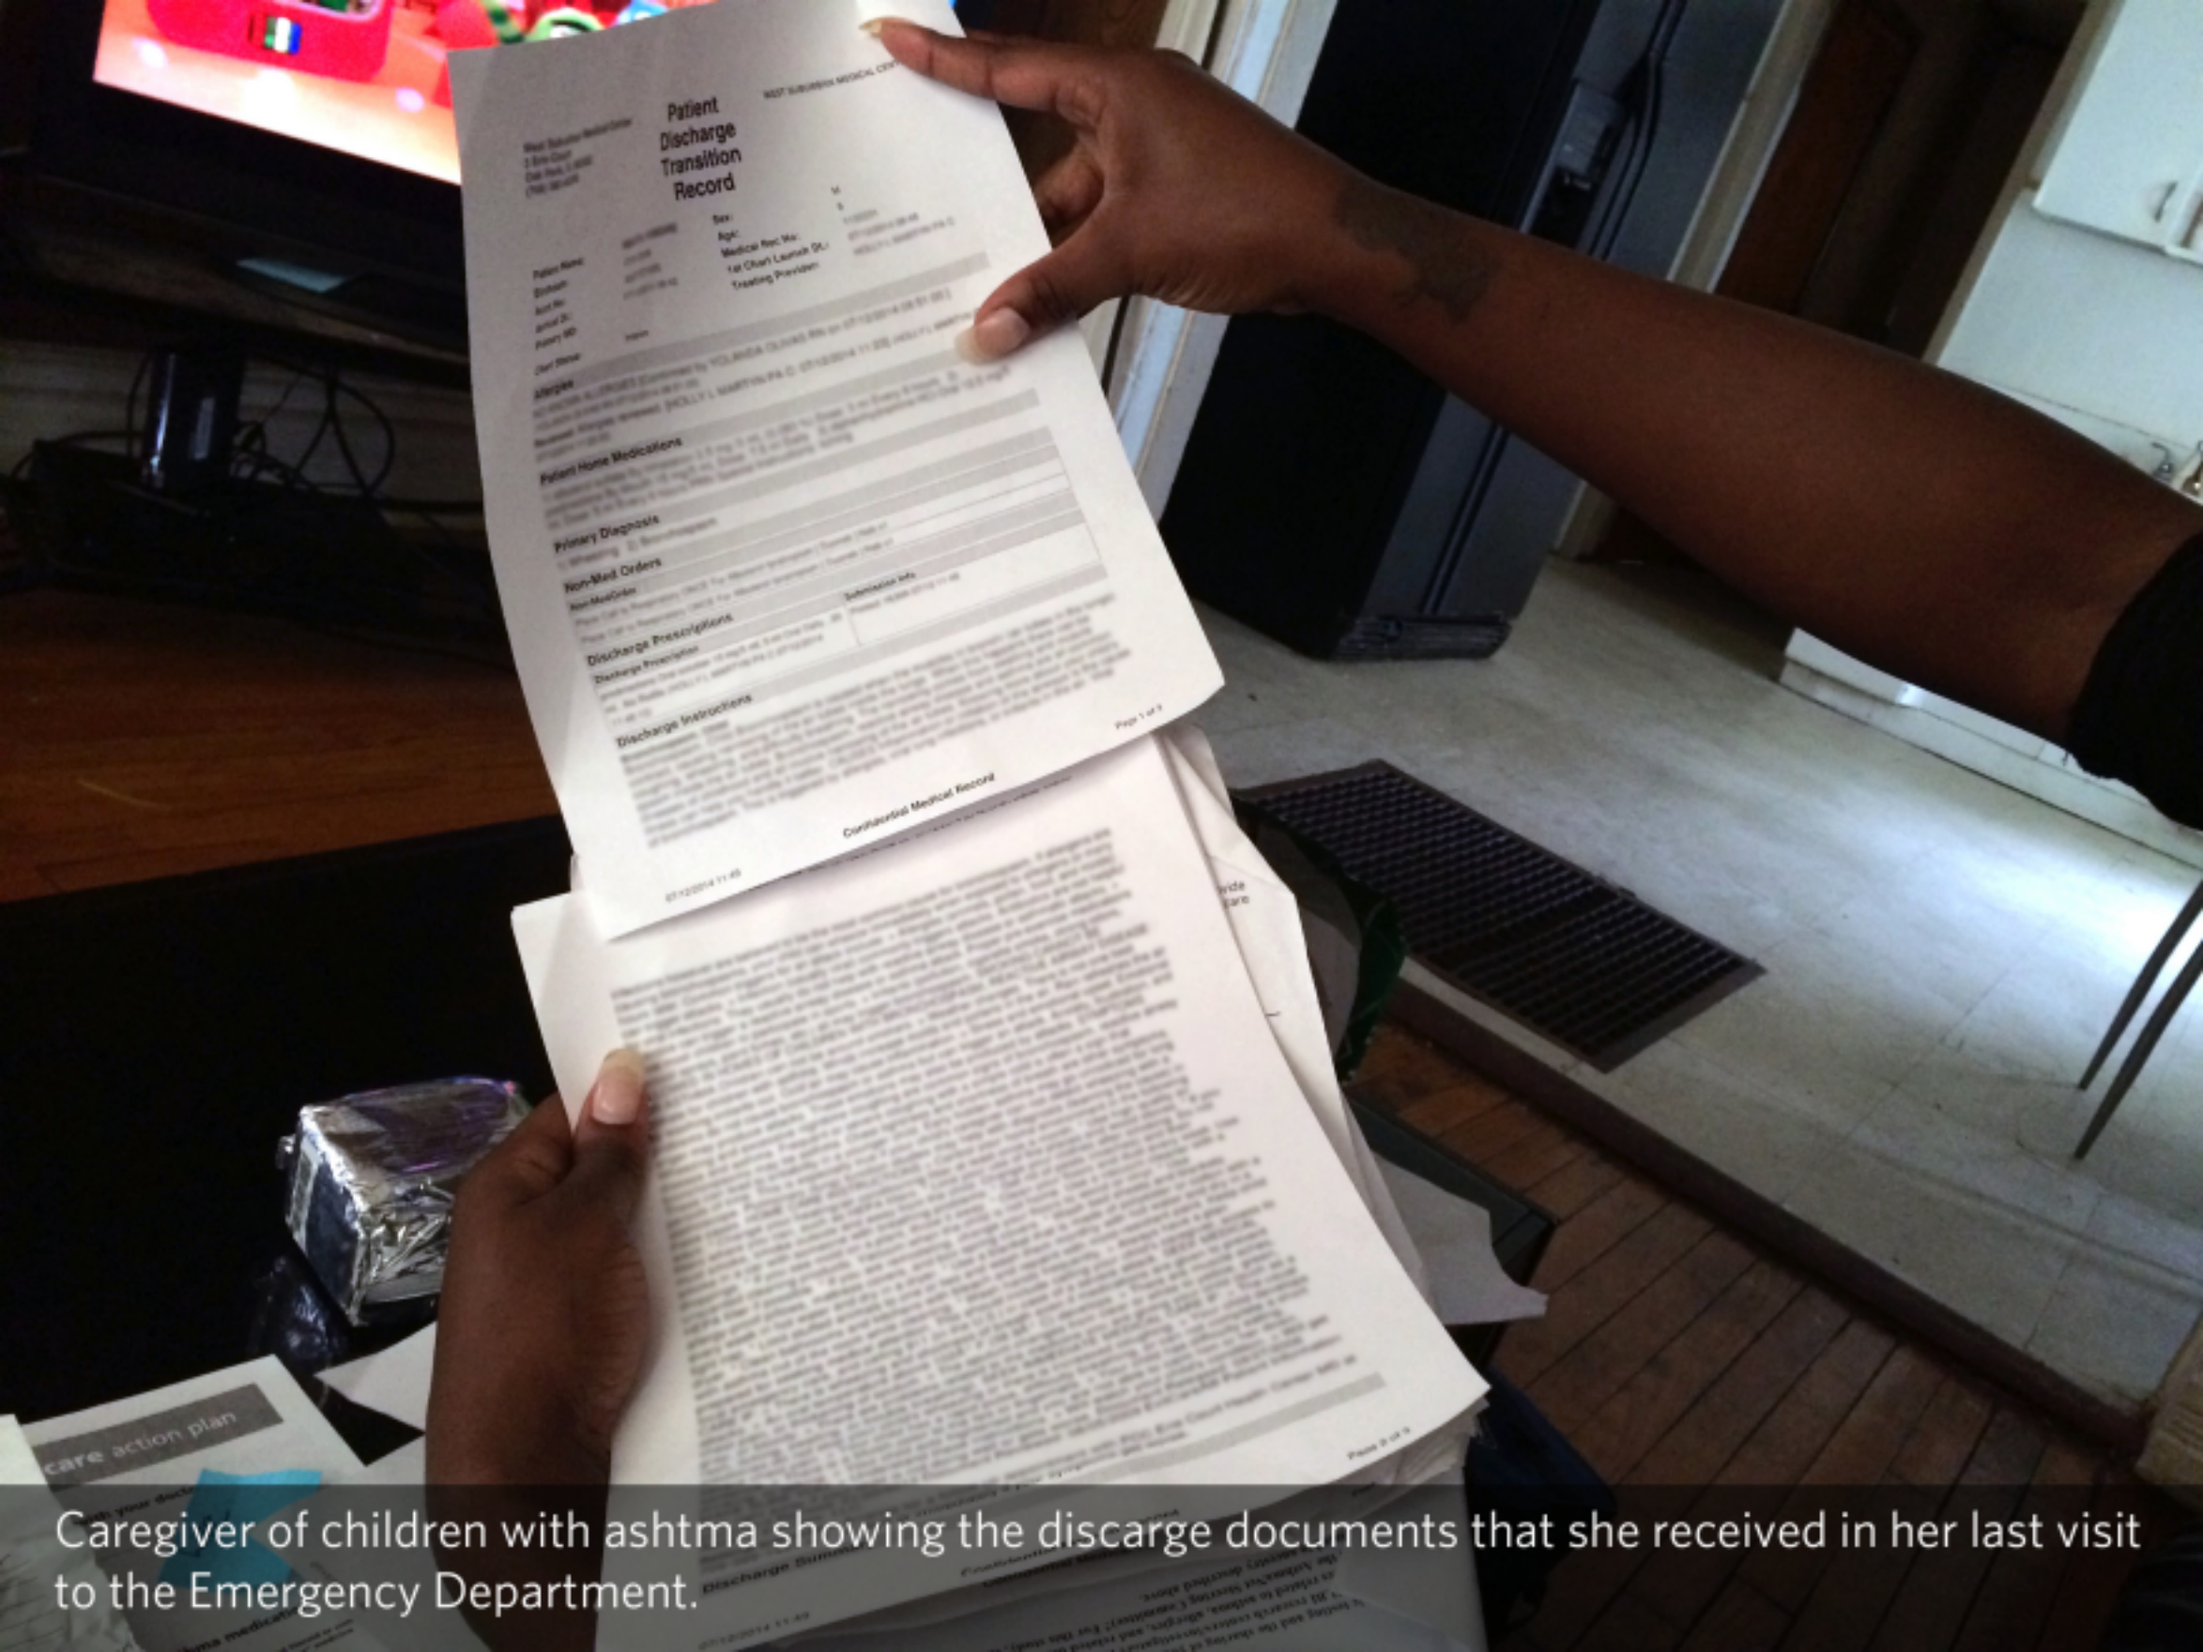
Use of the space to engage the different stakeholders, detail about the immersive client engagement workshop

Use of the space in the immersive client engagement workshop (Detail about the participatory activities that caregivers developed in the first round of interviews)

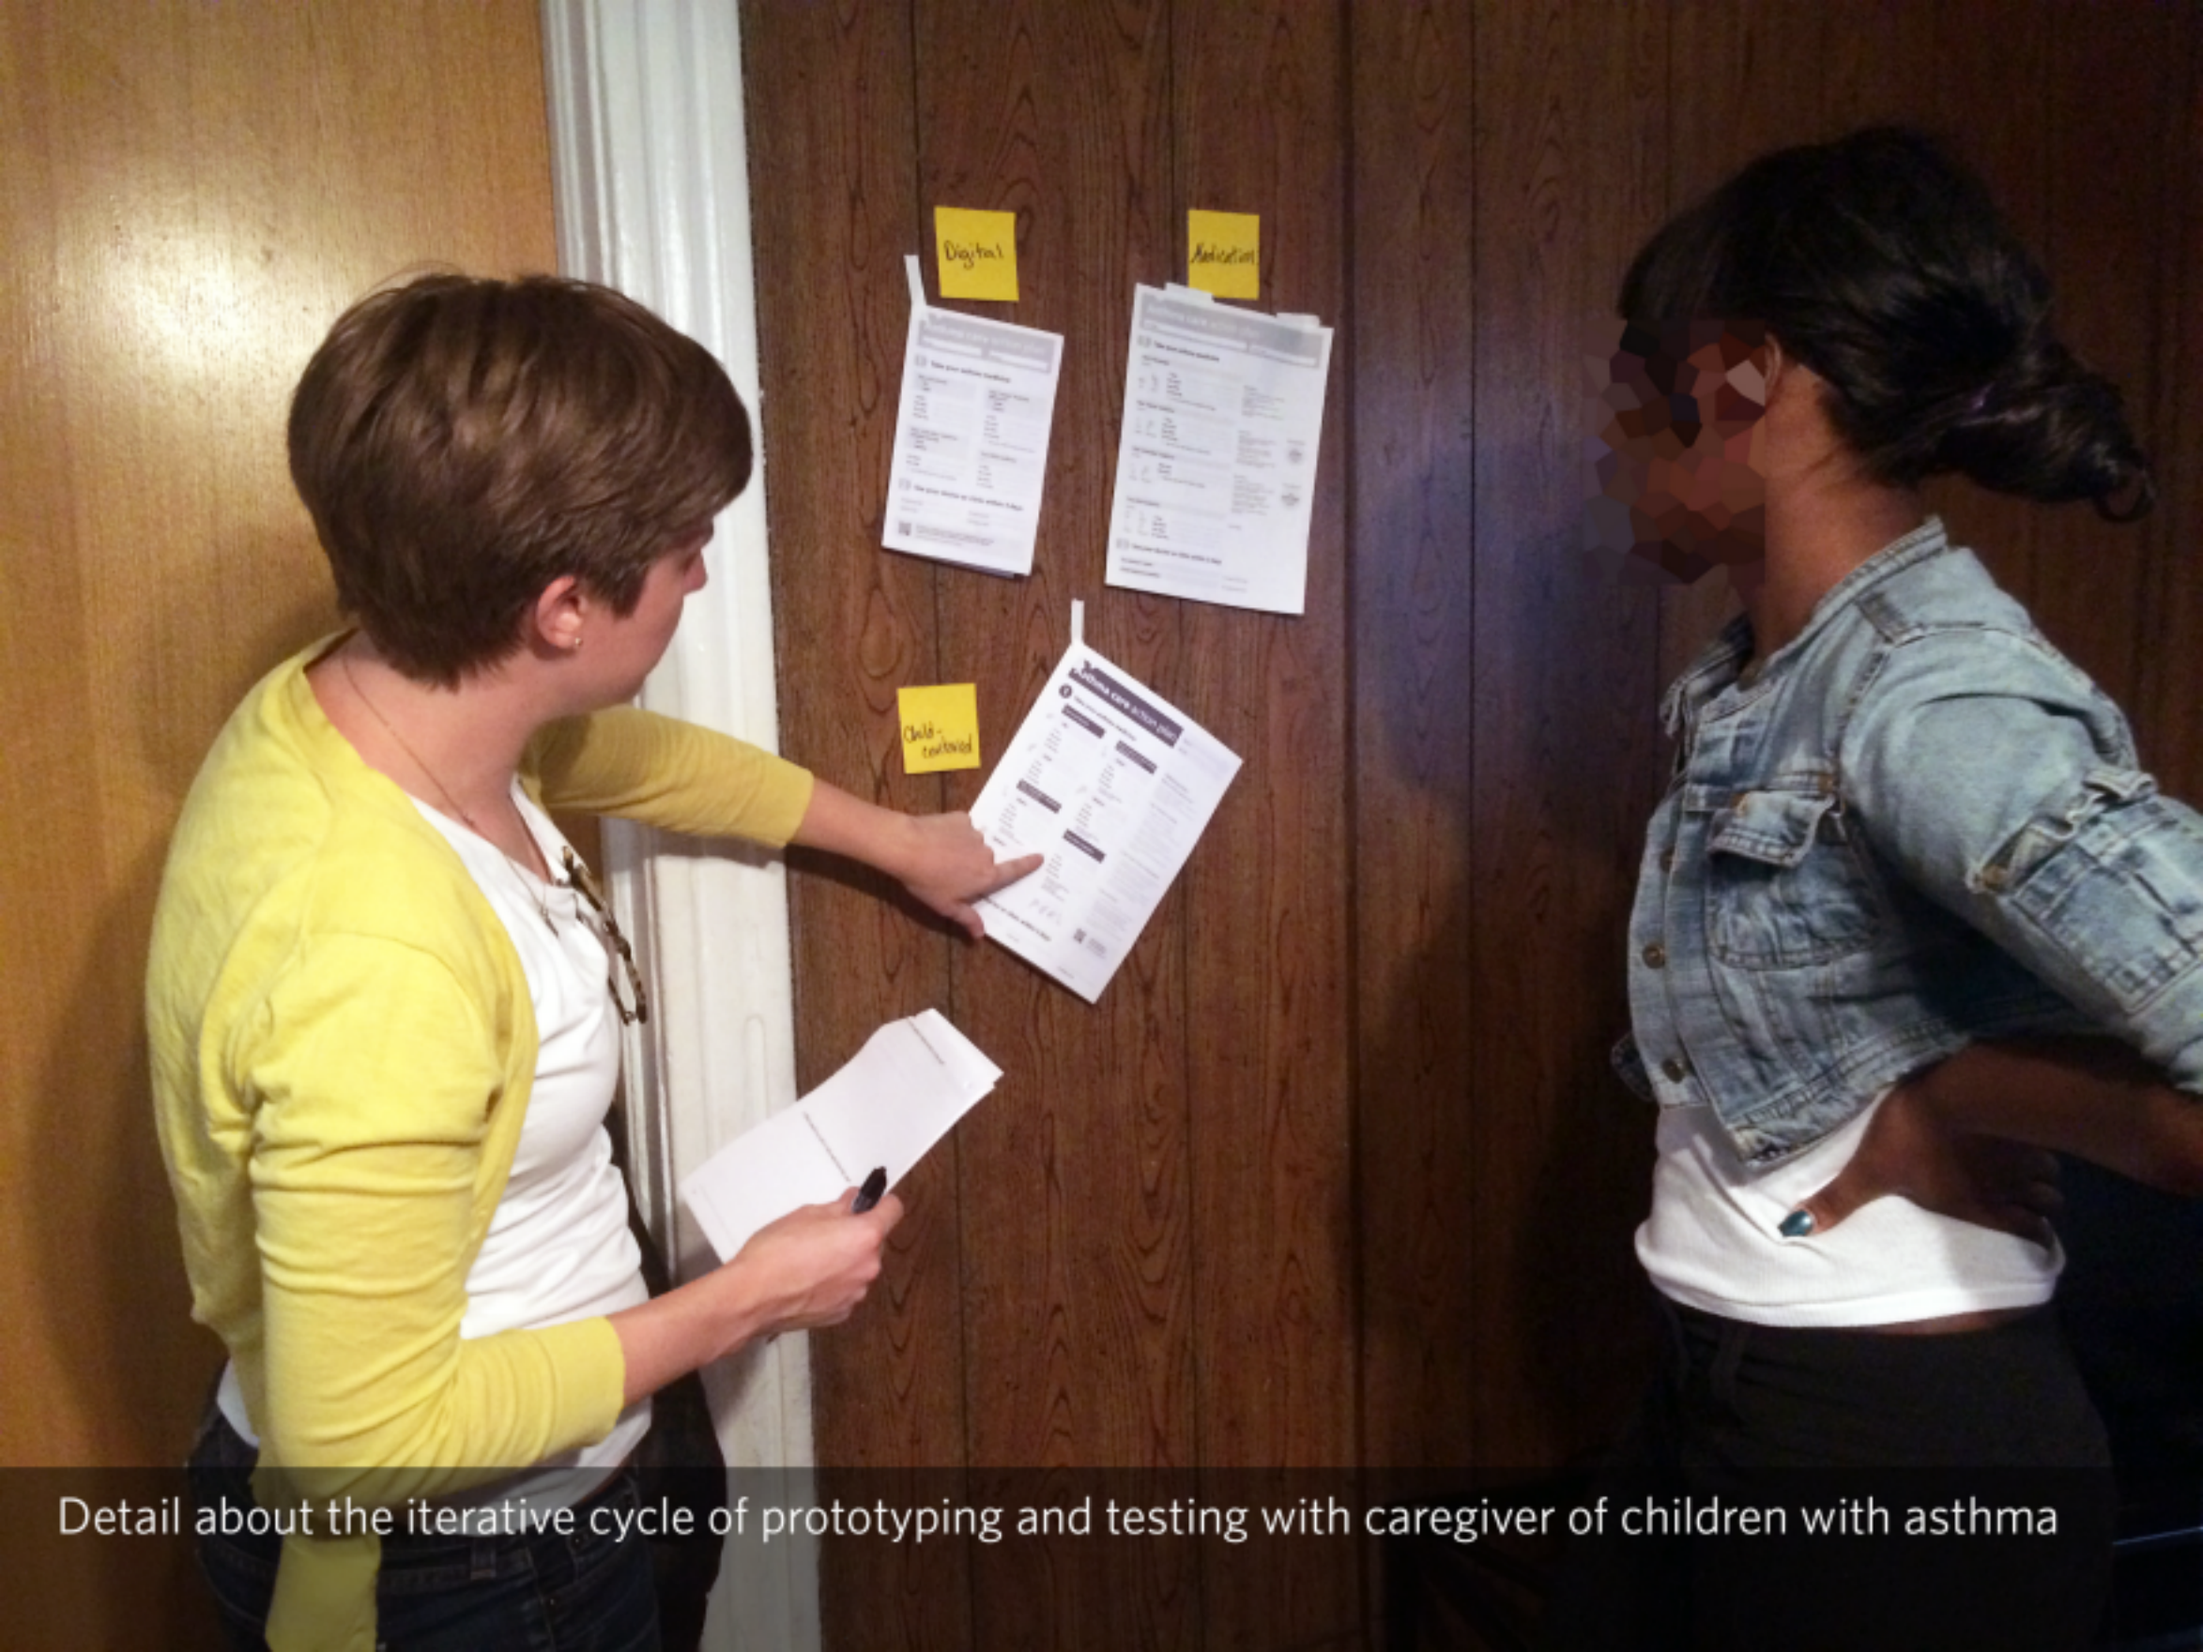
Detail about the immersive client engagement workshop



Caregiver of children with ashtma showing how she keeps in a save place the discarge documents that she received in her last visit to the Emergency Department.



Caregiver of children with ashtma showing the discarge documents that she received in her last visit to the Emergency Department.



Detail about the iterative cycle of prototyping and testing with caregiver of children with asthma

Data collected in each round of interviews was analyzed using grounded theory